With many parts of the world still under various restrictions or lock-downs due to the global Covid-19 pandemic, many are asking: what does the future hold?

In some places the future has already arrived: the Covid-19 situation has stabilized and higher education, like other parts of social and economic life, has transitioned to a 'new normal'.

This webinar explores what the new post Covid-19 'normal' looks like in Taiwan, New Zealand and South Korea with senior higher education leaders from these countries. Aside from sharing practical experiences and lessons learned, the speakers will also share their views on what the future holds: which changes are likely to be permanent? What opportunities have been created by the crisis?
